THE DAILY REBEL.

TUESDAY MORNING, JULY 28, 1863.

Be Frequent are the complaints which come to us from worthy citizens of the depredations of some of the soldiery of the various eacampments which sur round Gen. Bragg's Headquarters. Two instances have been brought to cur notice of the wanton destruction of property, without an atom of benefit to the cause, the country, or to the mischievous persons who committed the offences. In each instance we advised the parties thus damaged to appeal to the company officers of the soldier or soldiess so offending against the civil and military law-then to his Colonel, or his General of Brigade and Division in succession, and if the offender was not immediately made an example of-ther to appeal to the Commander ence, and premise some time or other to inquira nto the matter and punish the lawless soldier. If such be the case, the officer so acting disgraces the gilt on his collar as much as his

of the Department himself, and direct his attention to the matter. The reply to this advice has se often been that many of the officers express their segret with the subliment indiffer erty of his own people. There can be no excuse for an idle waste of other people's property, nor of theft, whether the Government supply the soldier with the necessaries of life or not. No delinqueincy on the part of Government officials in the furnishing of rations, justifies any seldier in becoming a common thief. We profess to be the friend of the Southern Soldier, regardless of rank, or social station. But we are at the same time the avowed enemy of crime, open or concealed whether in friend or foe, and we have little faith in those army officers, whose commands, by their acts of lawlessness, exhibit such a lack of military discipline.

How much we bear of extortion and the Jews! Is it quite certain that the Jews are the only assoculators?

fook at the country, far and wide. Go among our markets. Are exhorbitant demands for fond banished thence? Do we see simple patriotism everywhere except in our shops of traffic? poor soldiers in the country!

In the streets every day we see the most revolting spectacle. Peaches are selling from one to three dollars a dozen. Water melons from five to ten dollars apiece. We were rejoiced the other day when a party of seldiers took possession of a wagon and reduced the rates to a figure within reach of reason. It these mean and unpatriotic charges continue, the military should take charge of the matter and regulate the scale.

The idea which now and then finds a current voice among the more thoughtless advocates of arbitrary power, that martial law is seential to the success of any cause, defeats its argument in the assertion. The hair of a dog is not always good for the bite, and it is extremely doubtful whether the sacrifice of popular liberty is ever an agent of freedom. No nation is certainly recorded in history as having given up its rights in a case of emergency, that got them back again. The three few days since. branches of a republican system of government-Executive, Judicial and Legislativeare mutual arms of counsel and defense, and if they fail to resist with success invasion from abroad, it is not an evidence of their imbecility, nor a reason for their abolition. Those, who arge the investment of President Davis with supreme military power, surely cannot mean to dispense with courts of law and Congressional and State assemblies. If they do. they sadly misjadge the Southern character. and altogether misinterpret the wishes of the head of the Confederacy. He has already power in abundance, and so far from desiring more, would shrink, we honestly believe, from additional responsibility with modest patriotism.
